Linking the Epigrams With A Theme: The Example of Martial, Books Two and Three

This implies that he only leaves the city when he has no other option, unlike Sparsus who it is believed rarely visits the city. The following lines, in imitation of this epigram, were made by some Oxford wit, on Dr John Fell, Bishop of Oxford, who died in 1686: I do not love thee, Doctor Fell; The reason why I cannot tell.

Narrat te, Chione, rumor numquam esse fututam atque nihil cunno purius esse tuo. When Sosibianus calls his reputed father Dominus, as a title of respect, but which was also a term for a master of slaves, he confessed himself a verna, or born-slave.

Marcus Martialis (? — 104), Roman epigrammatist, poet

Tarentos, 3 which was wont to exhibit the statue of Pan, begins now, Maximus, to exhibit that of Canius.

A Commentary on Martial, Epigrams Book 9

A work of this kind, of course, is not designed to be read sequentially from Accius to Zoilus and a reviewer who engages in this form of reading risks inadvertent conversation in a dread malignus interpres. Justine with seven, Lycas with five, Lyde with four, Ida with three. The greatest part of the chapter concerns Catullus.

Martial's Epigrams

I noted no typographical errors, so it will read well for all. But this should not detract from the achievement of the authors, who are to be heartily commended for the foundational work they have created.

Marcus Martialis (? — 104), Roman epigrammatist, poet

A letter of Pliny's, of about 104, speaks of his recent death with real regret. But see, everybody is silent; say something now, Naevolus.

Martial's Epigrams

TO THE BROTHERS LUCANUS AND TULLUS. Seize them with either hand, and with your full grasp; even thus they will oft-times pass away and glide from your closest embrace. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
