The goal of the first section is to understand, model, and control a system's evolution as it reacts to its environment. The authors have tried to emphasize the importance of the digital document as the central element of the system. The second section is concerned with the problem of document retrieval. The third section is concerned with the problem of document delivery. The fourth section is concerned with the problem of document control. The fifth section is concerned with the problem of document updating.	David Bauder and the author for the remaining sections are not included in this volume.
