Knowing the percentage of workers with a college degree, for example, is helpful, but not all college degrees are equal. Yet, while the ECEC survey reported a much greater 69 percent advantage for public sector benefits, the Bender and Heywood total compensation gap narrowed only slightly, from 11-12 percent to roughly 7 percent public employees received more benefits than comparable private-sector workers, but the difference was much smaller than that reflected in the ECEC survey. Schwarzenegger issued a supposed hiring freeze, the state continued to hire more workers.
