Can Russia repopulate its Far East with the offer of free land?

I can't imagine anyone disputing that this work stands among the best of the Ellington suites -- even though it faces stiff competition, from such notable contenders as Black, Brown and Beige, the Perfume Suite, and A Drum Is A Woman and from less well-known collections like the Goutelas Suite and The River.

JJA Library

A constant objective was to see the unequal treaties, concluded before 1868, revised.

Manchuria and the “Far Eastern Question”, 1880-1910

It initially seemed to yield results when in April 1902 Russia promised to evacuate Manchuria completely, enabling Chinese rule to be restored in three stages September 1902, then April and September 1903. The alliance naturally proved accommodating to the Austrians, who hoped that a joint Franco-Russian attack, which would probably have utterly devastated the Ottoman Empire, could be prevented by diplomacy; but if diplomatic measures failed, the Austrian minister decided that he would support the partition of the Ottoman Empire—a solution disadvantageous to Austria, but not as dangerous as a complete Russian takeover of Southeastern Europe. The desired goal was a sinicization of Manchuria recognised by international authorities and founded on social and material factors population settlement, infrastructure, economic growth capable of making the result irreversible.

Eastern Question

His color chart recognizes a spectrum of black, brown and yellow, which at the time had been traditional since the late 19th century. This decision stemmed from concrete observations.

Far Eastern Borderlands

The portraits in the Far East Suite display a variety, a range of emotion and expression -- but also an interconnectedness -- that surpass most of the others; there exists no better example of Ellington's genius for transmuting the most personal artistic details into music of universal insight. Its commercial interests must also be considered.
