Golding earned his bachelor of arts degree from the University of Exeter and his master of arts and doctorate from the University of Chicago. Wrens are small, plain birds, yarn is what one knits with. Yet again, the slippage of the signifier is halted by the introduction of primal, childhood realities: mother's handiwork is an art of confident connectivity: once given form, her yarn will not unravel.

After all, the writing of non-native speakers has come to be seen as increasingly fundamental to our definition of poetic modernism: Gertrude Stein,

Mina Loy, Louis Zukofsky all of whom in childhood used at least in part a language other than English --modernist experimentation can be said to stem from the explosion of unified national poetic traditions.
